memorizing him who made the day
read the following poem: "Weich are synonyms. It is it gether, sitting that we should, at the time, review again the history of the ompany. To many it is familiar.
The years have thereby been dimmed dimmed with age, while to others will be quite new, but all I feel sure will be willing to go over the years of transformation with me very briefly.
I catch again the uprilt of devotion and of self-sacrifice that was necessary to overcome the misfortunes and discouragements of the pioneer days.
I feel that there is a good ground impetus, therefore, for the struggle of the present."

On the same day that the Vermont Legislature granted the charter for the collegiation of the United States was organized. On the 16th of June, 1872, the corporation, of which Gen. Ira Allen was the member, selected the site for the University of Vermont. Thereby was determined that the lot selected was situated on the lake back from the lake, reached an elevation at the top of 277 feet above the lake, and contained fifty acres.
The Vermont Legislature, in accordance with the record which states that the corporation ordered ten acres of the fifty acres for the college site.
This was an ideal spot for the seat of learning of high learning. It was as it was, on a pinnacle of land overlooking in every direction the incomparable beauties of nature.

The first building was a small building which was accomplished the building began which was built on a hill. It was The grove, with its trees, the campus were set out from year to year by the different classes. The Guy Catlin homestead stood on the present site of the Mary Fetter hospital.

MORE LAND ADDED.

It was not until 1839 that more land was added to the campus. Then 21 acres were purchased. In 1846 the three college buildings were united and made one. For the next twenty-five years few changes were made. In 1861 the new medical building on the campus on the hill. Then in 1862 a museum building was erected on the present site of the Science hall. By 1869 the new president's home was completed in its present location. Mr. Howard, who had been appointed his good work for the university. One of his undertakings was the reconstruction of the main college building. At this time the shining dome of middle college, which had been the pride of the campus, the most conspicuous landmark in the "charming plain valley and such a cry as went up from students and former students at its unavoidable removal! Mr. Howard had planned the medical college building, which stood where the present one now stands. The old medical building, which still stands at the south end of the campus, had been outgrown and was torn down. The new one was consumed by fire in 1921. The bronze statue of Gen. Lafayette which stands immediately in front of the Old College building was the gift of the best works of the artist J. C. Ward.

The school held its different houses. At the Alpha Tau Omega reception Prof. E. C. Jacobs, Prof. Frederick Tupper, P. F. Jones and R. C. Brown received. The guests were entertained. Refreshments.

At the Kappa Sigma house Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Grady received. There were about 30 guests, who were served with refreshments.

The Sigma Nu fraternity had its reception in conjunction with the Pi Beta Phi fraternity, it being the 20th anniversary of both societies. In the reception were Misses M. B. 18, Robert Parker, '19, Miss Barbara Brown, '19, and Miss Caroline Meigs, '18. Miss Eldora Meigs and Miss Mildred Powell served refreshments.

The Delta Theta house, Professor and Mrs. G. P. Burns and Judge and Mrs. E. C. Mower were in the receiving line, and Miss Elsa Woodbury and Miss Linda "Wald" served refreshments.

At the house of the Phi Kappa and Mrs. H. F. Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hall and Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Blake received about one hundred guests. Refreshments were served.

Because so many men had gone away to join the army or navy, the Sigma Phi fraternity thought it inadvisable to hold a reception this year.

At the Lambda Iota house Mr. and Mrs. E. C. McIntosh, Misses L. Harris and Miss Madeline Boardman were in the receiving line, while Miss Pauline Lyons, Miss Mathilda Krayer of Scranton, Pa., Miss Bertha Hill, Miss Marie McMahon, and Miss Jane McIntosh served refreshments.

The girls' societies held luncheons Saturday afternoon. The Pi Beta Phi held a party at the Elmerwood house on Saturday noon. The guests were Mrs. E. C.
